

Project 2025 renewable energy

Project 2025, a policy blueprint created by allies of former President Donald Trump, would increase Ohio households' annual energy spending and cost the state tens of thousands of jobs by 2030 compared to a continuation of current federal law and policies, a new analysis finds.

Project 2025 would dismantle labor standards and defund renewable energy programs, sabotaging the clean energy transition and hindering Americans from accessing high-quality union jobs.

EERE will ensure an affordable, reliable, and resilient power system by addressing challenges in adding new renewable energy and increased demand from broad-scale electrification.

Project 2025, a controversial conservative roadmap that aims to guide the next Republican administration, calls for the elimination of multiple energy- and environment-related offices and rules...

2 days ago; Project 2025 could spell an end to many of the new clean energy jobs that have supported communities who need them the most. Over 270,000 new good-paying and union clean energy jobs have been created since August 2022 when the IRA passed, another 1.5 million potential new jobs are projected over the next decade if we continue on the path we are on.

The analysis shows how Project 2025 would halt--and, in many cases, reverse--efforts to combat the climate crisis and advance environmental justice, exacerbating extreme weather events and...

Project 2025 seeks to undo much of that progress by slashing funding for government programs across the board, weakening federal oversight and policymaking capabilities, rolling back legislation passed during Biden's ...

There's an entity called the National Renewable Energy Lab in Colorado, which is one of the most important entities in the world for climate science. They run climate modeling and they do a huge amount of research into renewables, emission reductions and climate change solutions. ... Project 2025 also reflects a complete distrust of career ...
